in this hot weather, may find a malicious satisfaction in the closing paragraph of the Saratoga correspondence of the New York Post:

"What people come to Saratoga for I am at a loss to perceive. Not for its water, for it is a bout the same as that of New York harbor; not for its coolness, for it is a hot place; not for relaxation for it is a round of dissipation and excitement. Something more primitive would suit the toilworn man better—a tent in the woods, a lodge by a lake or the senshore, a nock in some mountain, but not such an overcrowded, hot and dirty place. But then, it is the fashion."

The Pardoning of Russell.

The Pardoning of Russell.

From the Webbarg Herold.

The Wheeling Intelligencer learns that the President has pardoned C. W. Russell, formerly of Wheeling, nore recently of the Confederacy, and that he is hereafter to reside in Baltimore his pardon having been induced through the agency of prominent railroad parties in that city. In pardoning Russell, President Johnson has pardone dithe meanest, most deliberate and cold blooded traifor that joined the ranks of rebellion from West Virginia, and probably the man of all others who had most to do with fostering disloyalty in this State.

Wheeling, W. Va., Aug. 18, 1865. Intion;

Resolved, That in our opinion the price of iron and steel to the consumer, in this country, will for a long time to come be very considerably enhanced by heavy duties, external and internat, necessarily imposed for revenue, that the internal tax upon the domestic article, increasing as it does the price, counteracts protective effect from the duty now imposed upon the foreign made article; and a wise policy deniands that the duty upon the latter should be increased so far as to give to the home manufacturers our own markets. By that means we can continue to manufacture, and the revenue will be raised mostly from the internal tax. The policy of protecting us in this manner concurs with a wise revenue system.

MAYOR'S OFFICE, C. Who led led where the consumer consumer the policy of internal tax and the Municipal authorities, having been referred to Major Gen. Emory, are decided and arranged satisfactorily.
